Securities which constitute a beneficial interest

Securities, in this context, are defined as shares, debentures, debenture stock, loan stock, bonds, units of a collective investment scheme within the meaning of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000(b) and other securities of any description (excluding monies deposited with a building society).

In terms of whether you hold securities which constitute a beneficial interest, this will depend on the value of the share holding you have. A beneficial interest will exist where:

- The total nominal value of your holding of securities in that body collectively exceeds £25,000, OR
- The total nominal value of your holding exceeds one hundredth of the total issued share capital of the body. The nominal value of a share is the face value of that share (that will be recorded on the share certificate), not the current market value. For example:
  - Company A has 100 £1 shares, and you own 1 share. You need to declare this.
  - Company B has 1 million £1 shares, of which you own 1000. The market value of the shares are £30. Even though the market value of your holding is £30,000, the nominal value is only £1000. 1 hundredth of the total issued share capital is 10,000 shares – as such, you don’t need to declare your holding.
- A company has more than one class of shares, and the total nominal value of the shares you hold of any one class exceeds one hundredth of the total issued share capital of that class. So if, for example, a company issued 10 debentures, and you held 1, you would need to declare. However, if you held 1 of 10,000 debentures, and 10 of 5,000 ordinary shares, you would not need to declare these.

If you know the companies in which your PEP, ISA or pension fund has invested and:

- those companies have entered in a relationship with the Council and
- your beneficial interest in the investment is greater than the levels indicated above, then you need to register that interest within the relevant area (see below). You are only required to register interests which are known to you. You are not required to investigate the investment portfolio of any PEP, ISA or pension scheme to which you may belong.

PECUNIARY INTERESTS

(i) Employment, office, trade, profession or vocation I undertake for profit, remuneration or other gain:

A short description of any job or business carried on by you including any trade, profession or vocation. You are required to declare any employment or business even if it is not within the council’s area. You are not required to declare what income you receive, but you should consider all your sources of income (e.g. income from main and other occupations, remunerated executive appointments, property transactions)

(ii) Name of employer(s) or post held in organisation listed in (i) above:

You must give the name of your employer or the person who appointed you.

(iii) Any payments or provisions or other financial benefit I have received within the past 12 months of this declaration in relation to my role as a member or towards my election expenses:

This section covers two areas. You need to ensure you include the value of the payment (approximate if necessary) and who made the payment (whether an individual or company).
